The Partner You Need to Move Data-Driven Strategies Forward

Did you know that AnalyticsIQ was the first data company to employ a full-time cognitive psychologist? That's how committed we are to delivering our clients unique data that makes an incredible impact, and can help answer the toughest of business questions.

Today, our team of data scientists and analysts develop dozens of new audience segments each quarter that reflect rapidly shifting behaviors, trends, and economics.

For example, when the world changed in the spring of 2020, we were the first marketing data company to respond with personas, based on our proprietary research. These audience insights helped brands understand how to best support their customers.

That means in addition to our standard BusinessCore offering, we work with clients to create custom data points aimed at answering their biggest challenges. Our cognitive psychological research leads to your proprietary insights - in record time.
